WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

Hate clearing your driveway after a blizzard? One man is trying to make the winter season easier to handle for homeowners. James Albis created the app SnoHub as a way to order plow services on demand, and this year, the service is coming to Boston. Read more about how it works inside and at metroboston.us.

TRUMP INTENDS TO MOVE EMBASSY TO JERUSALEM

1 President Donald Trump told Palestinian and Jordanian leaders that he intends to move the U.S. Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem, their representatives said, amid a growing outcry across the Middle East against any unilateral U.S. decision on the ancient city. Senior U.S. officials have said Trump is likely on Wednesday to recognize Jerusalem as Israel's capital while delaying relocating the embassy from Tel Aviv for another six months, though he is expected to order his aides to begin planning such a move immediately. The officials said, however, that no final decisions have been made. U.S. endorsement of Israel's claim to all of Jerusalem as its capital would break with decades of U.S. policy that the city's status must be decided in negotiations with the Palestinians, who want East Jerusalem as the capital of their future state.

TOUGH QUESTIONS IN GAY WEDDING CASE

2 The Supreme Court appeared divided with likely pivotal vote Justice Anthony Kennedy posing questions about a Christian baker's refusal to make a wedding cake for a gay couple but also questioning whether a Colorado civil rights commission that ruled on the issue was unduly biased against religion. The nine justices heard arguments in the major case on whether certain businesses can refuse service to gay couples if they oppose same-sex marriage on religious grounds. The case concerns an appeal brought by Jack Phillips, a baker who runs Masterpiece Cakeshop in the Denver suburb of Lakewood, of a state court ruling that his refusal violated a Colorado anti-discrimination law. Kennedy raised concerns about issuing a ruling siding with the baker that would give a green light to discrimination against gay people.

RUSSIA BANNED FROM 2018 WINTER OLYMPICS

4 Russia has been banned from the 2018 Pyeongchang Winter Olympics after evidence emerged of widespread doping but some of its athletes will be allowed to compete under the tag of "Olympic Athlete of Russia", the IOC said on Tuesday. The International Olympic Committee also decided to suspend Russian Olympic Committee (ROC) president Alexander Zhukov as an IOC member given that his membership is linked to his position as chief of the ROC who have been suspended from the Games. Russian Deputy Prime Minister Vitaly Mutko was also banned from any future participation at the Olympic Games. The IOC told a news conference that the Schmid report confirmed "the systematic manipulation of the anti-doping rules and system in Russia."

DOJ CONSIDERS POSSIBLE 'BUMP STOCKS' BAN

5 The U.S. Justice Department said that it is considering a possible ban on certain bump stocks, the attachments that make semiautomatic rifles fire faster and were used in the deadliest mass shooting in modern U.S. history in Las Vegas in October. The Las Vegas gunman's use of bump stock to allow his weapons to fire like fully automatic machine guns, has led to rare bipartisan agreement in Congress on the need to review whether they should be banned. "Possessing firearm parts that are used exclusively in converting a weapon into a machine gun is illegal, except for certain limited circumstances," U.S. Attorney General Jeff Sessions and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) said in a joint statement. "Today we begin the process of determining whether or not bump stocks are covered by this prohibition."

SnoHub app brings plow services to you on demand

Founder James Albis says his business is bringing the ease of Uber to snow removal.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Winter is on its way, and for homeowners, the season comes with the responsibility of shoveling your driveway and clearing off your steps all by yourself.

To James Albis, dealing with snow is one of the biggest pains of owning a home, so he came up with a solution: a way to order snow-plow service on demand through an app.

SnoHub, which Albis says is the "Uber of snow plows," works in a similar way to the ride-share service. The app connects homeowners to nearby contractors and alerts those contractors of snow removal needed in the area.

Once the contractor accepts the job, the homeowner can track the plower's movements through an in-app map. When contractors arrive at each site, they take before-and-after pictures, proving the job is done, and then the homeowners pays through the app.

SnoHub launched last year just in Fairfield County, Connecticut, where Albis lives. This winter, the service is launching in the Boston, New York City and Philadelphia metro areas, among others.

It wasn't just clearing snow that inspired Albis, but the way he's interacted with plow contractors in the past. He has had frustrating experiences, he said, waiting hours for a plow to come to his house, being asked to pay in cash and not getting the job done completely.

"When you're living in a tech world and all of a sudden you're forced to step back 40 years ago, it's a problem. … I said, 'Clearly, there has to be a better way,' and I looked at companies that have been disruptive, like Uber," he said. "People in this day and age only want to pay for what they use — they want to do things on their own terms, based on their own life, not based on when it's convenient for a snow-plow contractor."

The SnoHub app aims to change the way homeowners have their driveways plowed. At right: James Albis started SnoHub. SNOHUB/FACEBOOK, PROVIDED

The contractors deployed through SnoHub are vetted through the company and verified to have the proper licensing, insurance and background. Albis said SnoHub is also giving people the opportunity to earn extra income in the winter.

"If you're a painter, electrician, a firefighter — a lot of these guys have pickups and plows, and they want to earn some extra money," he said. "By introducing all these new guys who are very idle in the winter time, we helped out so many different types of people last winter get through it."

As with Uber, SnoHub does take a bit of the cut from contractors' pay: a 30 percent fee on transactions. For the homeowner, prices start at $59 for three inches of snow, increasing with every inch, and they can see the price estimate before they book their service.

Regular plow contractors will still have work, Albis said, because their business still comes from commercial accounts. By catering to residences, he's hoping to make handling the winter more convenient for homeowners.

Greater Boston mayors partner to tackle area housing shortage

Task force of 14 local leaders will focus on diversity, availability and affordability as population expands.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh, Somerville Mayor Joseph Curtatone and other local leaders are partnering up to address the housing shortage amid growth in the Greater Boston area's population.

The Metropolitan Mayors Coalition of Greater Boston, made up of 14 representatives from local cities and towns, announced the creation of the regional housing partnership Tuesday.

The point of the partnership, officials said, is to address the housing needs of the Greater Boston area, focusing specifically on housing production, diversity, cost, design and increasing stability in the lives of residents.

"Affordable housing is one of our top priorities in Boston — and we know that for Metro Boston to be affordable for all residents, we need to work together with cities and towns throughout the region," Walsh said in a statement. "This plan is another step forward toward ensuring all those who wish to live here can, and I look forward to working with our partner cities and towns across the region to continue creating homes for all."

Walsh has addressed the housing issue in the city's Imagine Boston 2030 plan. By 2030, Boston will need at least 53,000 more housing units than currently exist in order to keep up with the city's growing population, officials project. By 2050, an additional 42,000 units will be needed.

As housing becomes rarer and more expensive in the city's limits, residents are moving out into neighboring towns and cities.

"Our entire region is facing and must solve the same pressing challenge: Metro Boston's affordability crisis and its limited housing stock," Curtatone, mayor of Somerville, said in a statement. "But the solutions cannot be one-size-fits-all, which is why this task force is so critical."

Within the partnership, the 14 representatives have pledged to increase the pace of housing construction in every community throughout Metro Boston, so as to "share the burden" and increase affordability.

Officials want to create a variety of housing options — for rent and for sale — suitable for families. They will focus on ensuring new housing is near transit and in walkable areas. They will also weigh in on zoning changes, local policies and calculating funding for state aid toward public schools.

Representatives from Boston, Braintree, Brookline, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Newton, Quincy, Revere, Somerville and Winthrop make up the coalition.

53 K

BY 2030, BOSTON WILL NEED AT LEAST 53,000 MORE HOUSING UNITS TO KEEP UP WITH THE CITY'S GROWING POPULATION.

Danny Masterson gets the ax

With mounting pressure over claims by four different women who accused Danny Masterson of rape, the 41-year-old Scientologist has been ousted from Netflix's "The Ranch." And he's not going quietly.

After a Netflix spokesperson released a statement about Masterson's dismissal from the series, the actor released his own statement to People expressing his disappointment. "From day one, I have denied the outrageous allegations against me," he wrote. "I have never been charged with a crime, let alone convicted of one."

Worth noting, though, that the LAPD has been investigating sexual-assault claims against Masterson — and a possible Church of Scientology cover-up — since March.

Masterson can now add himself to the list of disgraced Hollywood men who used their positions of power to harass women. Have fun with your awful cronies, my dude.

Boy, bye.

Angelina says words about Brad

Angelina Jolie is making her way back into the spotlight via talking about ex Brad Pitt.

The 42-year-old actress maybe thought that filming "By the Sea" together would save their marriage — but, uh, it didn't.

"I thought it would be a good way for us to communicate," she says. "But there was a heaviness probably during that situation that carried on, and it wasn't because of the film."

No word if Pitt is still coping with Frank Ocean albums and sculpting, but we sure as hell hope so.

This man is not Lilo's boyfriend

Surely, you haven't given a thought to Lindsay Lohan — perhaps not since the time she claimed she had been racially profiled. Nonetheless, we are here to report today that a man you have never heard of is not Lindsay Lohan's boyfriend. Thank you for your time.

Though for a brief moment it appeared that the 31-year-old was dating very rich Korean bodybuilder Je-yong Ha, she is, um, not. The story originated from Liftn, a weight-lifting site, and spread through Twitter and Facebook. But according to one of Lohan's friends, it's strictly platonic.

"Lol they are 100% not dating at all. They're just friends," a source told Vanity Fair. Now that's how you make a statement!

For now, we can expect Je-Yong to continue to post pictures of himself in Lohan's company. That is, when he's not posting pictures of himself in overly-snug polo shirts on his private plane.

Deliver your holiday cards by dogsled

Dog musher Blair Braverman and her team of huskies want to bring them to the post office for you.

Dog musher Blair Braverman and her team of huskies. JAMES NETZ

Taking the time to actually write someone a holiday card and mail it feels like too much of a hassle these days. But what if a professional dogsled team of very good huskies made that trip to the post office for you?

This a real-life adorable offer, courtesy of Blair Braverman, a pro dog musher and freelance writer. The 29-year-old tweeted from her handle @FeministJackLondon that if you mail her your cards, she and the pups will carry them to the post office via dogsled, for free (provided you stamp the letters, of course). It's impossible not to like the idea.

Braverman doesn't mind the errand. She and her husband and their 21 canine racers live out in the woods, in the 500-person town of Mountain, Wisconsin, where the post office a mile down the road is probably their closest connection to the outside world.

Well, except for Twitter: Despite her spotty internet service, Braverman, a columnist for Outside Magazine and the author of a memoir about her early days of dog mushing called "Welcome to the Goddamn Ice Cube," has gained a substantial following of fans of her dogs and her words.

"I started sharing pictures of the dog team, and people really started to care about them, it was so moving to me," she tells me on a call made via Google phone (she has no landline or cell service). Connecting with folks over snail mail seemed like another fun way to offset the isolation of the writer-musher lifestyle.

Braverman will stamp your cards with this adorable seal.
INSTAGRAM/@ MOUNTAIN_DOGS_RACING
THIS LETTER WAS CARRIED BY DOGSLED

And for Refried, Haricot, Garbanzo, Fava, et al. (several members of the pack are named after different kinds of beans), it's no big deal to make a quick stop at the P.O., as they're out trekking through the snow all day anyway. They're training for a 400-mile race at the end of January called the John Beargrease Sled Dog Marathon in Duluth, Minnesota, and Braverman is hoping to get them doing up to 40-miles at a time.

Besides, dogsledding and mail delivery go together, historically.

"The sport evolved in part as a way to deliver mail to really isolated northern communities and so a lot of modern races retrace those mail delivery routes," she tells me.

As adorable proof that the mail-mutts have toiled through the snow to transport the letters, Braverman will stamp each card with a silhouette of her dog, Refried, printed, "This letter was carried by dogsled."

The offer stands from now through New Year's. Braverman advises folks to allow an extra two weeks for the mail to arrive, you know, factoring in the dog-travel.

Better yet, forget your fam, and just write these pup pals a letter.

Send your stamped and addressed holiday cards in a bigger envelope addressed to Blair Braverman, c/o Braver-Mountain Mushing, PO Box 26, Mountain, WI, 54149.

Edelman to read new children's book at Christmas event

The Patriots star will bring some holiday cheer to the Seaport.

MATT JUUL
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

Julian Edelman may be injured, but he's keeping himself busy this holiday season.

The Patriots star and proud new papa will read his latest children's book at the sixth annual Christmas in the City Celebrity Holiday Tree and Wreath Auction on Dec. 7. Fans who stop by the Seaport Hotel and World Trade Center on Thursday night will get to see the first public reading of Edelman's "Flying High 2," a follow-up to his 2016 book about the adventures of a football-loving squirrel named Jules and his teammates, including a goat named Tom.

According to a release, "Flying High 2" will chronicle Jules' "journey of a lifetime competing in the Super Bowl," so it's basically a kid-friendly recap of New England's amazing run in the playoffs last season.

In addition to the reading, the event will feature a live auction, which will include items ranging from a Christmas tree decorated by Edelman to signed copies of the wide receiver's book. All proceeds will benefit Christmas in the City, a volunteer-run organization that donates toys and clothing to kids in need.

"I'm a longtime supporter of Christmas in the City and the work they do to help children in need," Edelman said in a statement. "I recently became a father and am grateful to be part of bringing joy to boys and girls during a time when their family may not be able to do it all on their own. We can all use a little help at times and Christmas in the City offers that to families struggling with homelessness and other issues."

Deck the halls with the Patriots star.

The event will serve as the kick-off for Chirstmas in the City's annual toy drive as well. The organization asks that attendees bring a new, unwrapped toy to donate.

Tatum shooting the lights out

The Celtics rookie has quickly established himself as a top NBA shooter.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

The Celtics made the right decision by trading back in the draft for sharp-shooter Jayson Tatum. GETTY IMAGES

Nearly six months ago Danny Ainge enraged most Celtics fans and had most NBA onlookers scratching their heads when he traded away the No. 1 overall pick to Philadelphia in exchange for the No. 3 overall pick and a future first-round pick.

Boston fans had been researching how to get their hands on Markelle Fultz jerseys as Fultz had been widely regarded as the top talent in the 2017 draft for months. But as he often does, Ainge went against the grain and against common thinking. Today, Ainge again looks like a genius as he has already "won" that blockbuster of a swap.

Fultz not only looked sheepish in the summer league, he also starting shooting free throws like a fourth grader, and then got hurt. Also, the pick the C's got from the Sixers looks like it's going to be a great one. The Celtics will get the Lakers pick via Philly if the Lakers hold a pick between No. 2 and No. 5 in this upcoming draft. And finally, the man that the Celtics drafted No. 3 overall, Jayson Tatum, easily looks like the best talent from the Class of 2017.

In an NBA world where top-notch shooting is the attribute most coveted by teams, the Celtics may have the best young shooter in the league in Tatum. That was ever-so apparent Monday night at the Garden in the C's 111-110 victory over the Bucks. Tatum went 4-of-4 from 3-point range in the first quarter and had 14 points right out of the gate. When it comes to 3-point percentage this season, Tatum is shooting an absurd .513. It's easily the best mark in the NBA, 30 percentage points ahead of the next best dude (Chandler Parsons at .483).

As Scott Maxwell of BostonCelticsForever pointed out on Twitter Monday night, Tatum's 3-point percentage is currently higher than Los Angeles Lakers rookie Lonzo Ball's free throw percentage (.500).

The great thing for Celtics fans is that typically players get better with age when it comes to shooting. With his pedigree, the 19-year-old Tatum could legitimately become the best shooter the NBA has seen since Steph Curry came along.

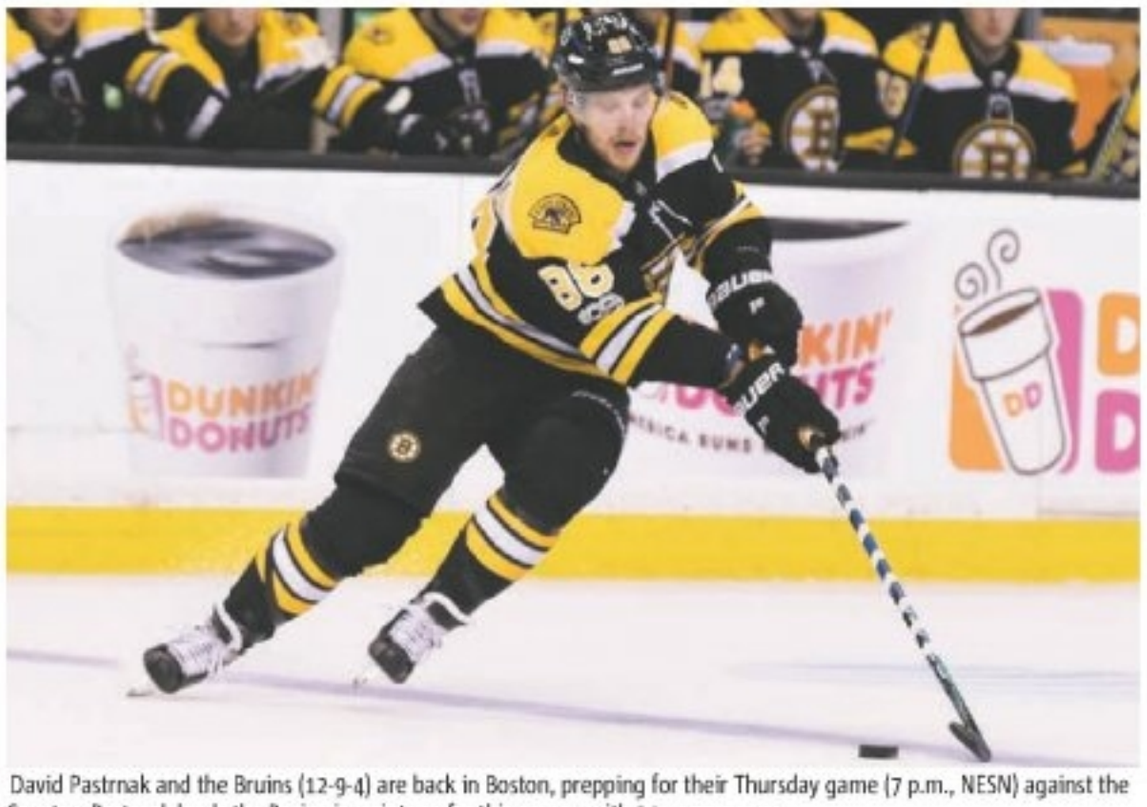
"The thing about [Tatum] is when he came in for his [pre-draft] workout, he made a lot of shots and it looked effortless," Celtics head coach Brad Stevens said this week. "That's usually a pretty good sign. It didn't look like it was just one of those days where he was just hitting everything. He would miss two in a row and it wouldn't dissuade him from hitting the next one. He had no thought about making the next five, he just kept shooting. For a guy with his frame, he shoots it effortless. He's gonna be able to shoot it deeper, he's gonna be able to make it off running once he gets a bit stronger and more used to everything else. He's gonna be one heck of a shooter."

A better Tatum comparison than Curry is probably Carmelo Anthony. Anthony is 6-foot-8, as is Tatum and both players came from big-time college basketball programs (Anthony with Syracuse and Tatum with Duke). Both also played college ball for just one season and both enjoyed sterling rookie shooting campaigns in the NBA. Anthony averaged a whopping 21.0 points per game in his rookie year. Tatum is currently averaging 13.9 (sixth among rookies).

Brand new streak

It's unlikely they get this one up to 16 but the Celtics have a brand new winning streak, victorious in their last three games. The Celtics will look to make it four in a row tonight at the Garden when they welcome the Dallas Mavericks, who have the worst record in the Western Conference at 7-17. The Mavs actually gave the C's fits in Dallas last month, however, as Kyrie Irving had to score 47 in an OT win.

Back in the Hub



David Pastrnak and the Bruins (12-9-4) are back in Boston, prepping for their Thursday game (7 p.m., NESN) against the Coyotes. Pastrnak leads the Bruins in points so far this season with 24. GETTY IMAGES

Virgo Preparing your living space for the festive season is encouraged, but stay within your budget or someone will complain about your spending habits.

Scorpio Be careful sharing information. Make sure your facts are straight and do your best not to upset someone who is likely to cause problems for you in the future.

Sagittarius Emotions will be difficult to control when dealing with money and legal matters. Don't act in haste when you should be doing everything to get ahead.

Capricorn Getting together with old friends or attending a reunion will bring back fond memories. Revisit a proposed joint venture you have yet to start.
